Sarah Booker head teacher and trainer at The Horse Fair, located in Columbia, Missouri, is known throughout the midwest as one of the fastest growing young pro's in the horse business today. Sarah trains both junior and amateur riders, along with their horses, for competition in the hunter, huntseat equitation, jumper, dressage, and combined training fields.

Sarah's riding career began at the age of two and she has competed successfully ever since. Sarah has qualified for the prestigious A.H.S.A. Medal; she went on the show at the Pennsylvania national Horse Show in the national equitation finals and has won many state and regional awards. Sarah is truly dedicated to the horse business, having taught since 1978. She also judges hunter shows, paddock announces, and is a course designer for both hunter and A.Q.H.A. shows.

Sarah's philosophy in teaching is to create horses and riders who are workmanlike, yet happy in the jobs which they have chosen for themselves. Being a seasoned equitation rider herself, Sarah believes that a proper position is the key to a successful horse and rider combination.
